

mirabile dictu

Home » Uncategorized » Four Links: Carole King, National Woman Suffrage Parade, Edward Phillips Oppenheim, & Roman Historical Novels

Four Links: Carole King, National Woman Suffrage Parade, Edward Phillips Oppenheim, & Roman Historical Novels

Posted on March 16, 2013 by Kat

It is Women's History Month.

I have done nothing to celebrate it.

I am not reading any histories of suffragists or the new biography of Margaret Fuller, though those are important.

Instead I am thinking about Carole King, one of the best, most successful, and influential American singer-songwriters.

King's memoir, A Natural Woman, is on my TBR.

Here is a link to her website.

And here is a video of Carole King singing, " (You Make Me Feel like) a Natural Woman."

Carbon Treadprint

200 days biking 2012.

"Woman Reading" by Alexander Deyneka

Recent Posts

- Balzac's Cousin Pons
- Four Links: Carole King, National Woman Suffrage Parade, Edward Phillips Oppenheim, & Roman Historical Novels
- Dead Writers Don't Read Blogs
- Blue Woman & Balzac's Louis Lambert
- Winner of Giveaway of The Unknown Masterpiece

Archives

- March 2013
- February 2013
- January 2013
- December 2012

Best of 2012

2. Below is a photo of The National Woman Suffrage Parade, 1913, "the first civil rights parade to use the nation's capital as a backdrop. "Read about it at: <http://womenshistorymonth.gov/>

3. Do you ever feel like going to manybooks.net just to see what books are featured?

Today I found The Profiteers by Edward Phillips Oppenheim, who was a popular writer of genre fiction and thrillers.

Here's an excerpt:

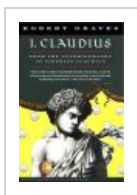

“ a tall, pale, beautifully gowned woman who had detached herself from a group close at hand turned towards them.

“It is Lady Dredlinton,” Kendrick whispered in his ear.

“Then I will only say,” Wingate concluded, “that Lord Dredlinton's commercial record scarcely entitles him to a seat on the Board of any progressive company.”

Well, possibly I won't read it, but how nice that it's free if I want to.

4. I forgot to tell you yesterday to beware the Ides of March yesterday, so I hope instead you will enjoy this list of The 50 Best Historical Novels for a Survey of Ancient Roman History.

It includes Steven Saylor's Roma, Robert Graves's I, Claudius, Evelyn Waugh's Helena, Colleen McCullough's Masters of Rome series, and several books I've never heard of.

Share this:

Twitter

Facebook

Like this:

★ Like

One blogger likes this.

This entry was tagged Carole King, Women's History Month. Bookmark the permalink.

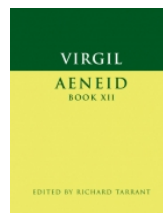

Search ...

Blogroll

- A Common Reader
- Asylum
- Belle, Book, and Candle
- Books I Done Read
- Buried in Print
- Dolcebellezza
- dovegreyreader scribbles
- Ellen and Jim Have a Blog, Two
- Fresh in the Delaware River Valley
- Girlebooks
- Interpolations
- Kevin from Canada
- Pages Turned
- Random Jottings
- Redeeming Qualities
- Reveries under the Sign of Austen
- Silver Season
- Stuck in a Book
- The Book Trunk
- The Daily Glean
- The Mookse and Gripes
- Thinking in Fragments
- Tony's Book World
- Under the Sign of Sylvia 2
- Vintage Reads

Currently Reading

About Me

I am a writer of occasional reviews, essays, and casual musings.

Contact me:

mirabileictu.org@gmail.com

Meta

- Register

Leave a Reply

Enter your comment here...

- Log in
- Entries RSS
- Comments RSS
- WordPress.com

Follow Blog via Email

Enter your email address to follow this blog and receive notifications of new posts by email.

Follow

Blog at WordPress.com. | Theme: My Life by Justin Tadlock.

Follow

Follow “mirabile dictu”

Get every new post delivered to your Inbox.

Enter your email address

Sign me up

Powered by WordPress.com