

This Video About Women's Rights Will Both Inspire And Infuriate You

Women may have made massive strides in the fight for equal rights, but if this PSA teaches us anything, it's that there's still a long way to go.

A new video by UN Women celebrates pioneering females, such as Amelia Earhart, Soviet cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova and Olympian Sarah Attar, before showing viewers sexist terms and phrases formed by Google autocomplete.

The PSA is a follow-up to UN Women's much buzzed-about print campaign. In the ads, women's faces were matched with misogynistic phrases apparently conjured by the search engine when people typed in beginnings such as "women cannot" and "women shouldn't."

The takeaway from the new video is simple: "[At] this point in history, popular perception should be different and women should be seen as equal," the clip's YouTube description notes.

We couldn't have said it better ourselves.

Men saying this is feminist BS is one of the reasons feminists and women in general, still have work to do. When men realize that we really don't need them for as much as think and stop trying to desperately control us, we'll all be better off. And if these indoctrinated Stepford women can get that chip out of their brain and start thinking for themselves, then we won't always be dragged down by them. I'm not some man hating butch chick, I love men, but I refuse to be intimidated or made to feel inferior to them. We can peacefully coexist if men can EVER get it through their heads that we aren't going to allow them to move us backward.

Women should be in combat - For gender equality

Women should be silent in church - christianity against women's rights

Women should be allowed in combat - For women's rights

Men should...

Men should always pray - christianity subjugating men, implying we must show respect and bow down to a cruel and bloodthirsty god

Men should be what they seem - ?

Men should pay for dates - Social sexism against men

Men should die - Just utter hate by the other gender

And the point of the PSA is?

Women can change this. Today, women are in the unique historical position to advance their gender.

You can argue all you want about this, but religion has always been the number one reason that have kept women down throughout history. How do you advance women's freedoms and them doing great things for humanity when women's subjugation is regarded as "Holy Writ"? There are so many man-made religious interpretations of women being of less value than men, that a lot of women have been indoctrinated into believing it and submit to it. It's all nonsense and it's all for control. It is so insane and ignorant when they are denied their dignity and their rights because of bronze-aged Abrahamic verses that are the source of endless contention and excuse for women of the world, and they had no choice but to follow. It's now their day to show otherwise of their EQUAL VALUE.

· Hey everyone, look at me!

I have been an atheist since before I was an adult and tend to view religion as a mental illness. There is no doubt that the Abrahamic religions in particular are completely misogynistic, but I still have to slightly disagree with you. I think religion is used as a tool of oppression but is not the root cause of the oppression itself. It sure helps people justify their own terrible actions, but I don't believe religion is, strictly speaking, necessary for such oppression. Just as with the oppression of homosexuals, the reason for that tendency is biological in nature and the religious justification for it is the veneer that we over-thinking-apes lay on top of it. The value of rejecting religion then is not that all of this will instantly go away, but that with a more scientific view of the world we can recognize the reasons behind these types of behavior without throwing a bunch of metaphysical nonsense in the mix and therefore address the issues more successfully.
